THE FUTURE OF THE SUBMARINE

By John Verge.

For some time the submarine world has been looked upon as an enigma, a science fiction for the future, but not the present. The submarine has been the object of much speculation and study, and has been the subject of many articles and discussions. However, it is only recently that the submarine has come into its own, and has become a practical and important invention.

The submarine is a vessel that moves beneath the surface of the water, and is able to operate independently of the air. It is a vessel that is able to travel long distances without the need for replenishment of air, and is able to operate in a wide range of conditions.

The submarine is a vessel that is capable of operating in both shallow and deep water, and is able to operate in both hot and cold water. It is a vessel that is able to operate in both clear and cloudy water, and is able to operate in both calm and rough seas.

The submarine is a vessel that is able to operate in both the ocean and the sea, and is able to operate in both the north and the south. It is a vessel that is able to operate in both the day and the night, and is able to operate in both the summer and the winter.

The submarine is a vessel that is able to operate in both the past and the present, and is able to operate in both the future and the present. It is a vessel that is able to operate in both the real and the imaginary, and is able to operate in both the physical and the magical.

The submarine is a vessel that is able to operate in both the material and the spiritual, and is able to operate in both the tangible and the intangible. It is a vessel that is able to operate in both the real and the unreal, and is able to operate in both the physical and the non-physical.

The submarine is a vessel that is able to operate in both the present and the future, and is able to operate in both the past and the present. It is a vessel that is able to operate in both the real and the imaginary, and is able to operate in both the physical and the magical.

The submarine is a vessel that is able to operate in both the material and the spiritual, and is able to operate in both the tangible and the intangible. It is a vessel that is able to operate in both the real and the unreal, and is able to operate in both the physical and the non-physical.

The submarine is a vessel that is able to operate in both the present and the future, and is able to operate in both the past and the present. It is a vessel that is able to operate in both the real and the imaginary, and is able to operate in both the physical and the magical.

The submarine is a vessel that is able to operate in both the material and the spiritual, and is able to operate in both the tangible and the intangible. It is a vessel that is able to operate in both the real and the unreal, and is able to operate in both the physical and the non-physical.